TARIFF CONCESSIONS ON AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS
NEGOTIATED AT THE FOURTH ROUND OF GATT TARIFF
NEGOTIATIONS IN GENEVA

The fourth round of tariff negotiations opened at Geneva on January 18, 1956, with 22 of the 35 countries which are contracting parties to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (commonly referred to as GATT) participating.

Brazil, Burma, Greece, India, Indonesia, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Rhodesia and Nyasaland, Union of South Africa, and Uruguay are the contracting parties to GATT who did not participate in these negotiations. A listing of those countries with which the United States concluded tariff negotiations, together with the concessions in tariff rates negotiated on agricultural products, is set out in the tables below.

This publication covers only the results of the negotiations on agricultural products. A complete analysis of the results of the negotiations entered into by the United States has been released by the Department of State (Publication No. 6348, Commercial Policy Series No. 158).

Scope of Conference Activity

The United States concluded negotiations with all of the 21 other countries participating in the conference. The tariff concessions made by the United States become effective on June 30, 1956. Most of the tariff concessions made by other countries to the United States will also be effective by then.

There were about 60 bilateral negotiations entered into by the 22 participating countries. The total import trade of the negotiating countries in the items affected by concessions granted in the negotiations has been estimated as being about $2.5 billion a year.

The United States negotiated tariff reductions on items with a total 1954 trade value of about $911 million. Total imports are given since tariff concessions made by the United States apply to imports from all countries, except Communist dominated countries. The 1954 value of the United States imports from the 21 countries with which negotiations were completed was approximately $811 million. The United States granted concessions on agricultural imports valued at about $148 million.

The 21 other countries participating in these negotiations made tariff concessions to the United States on items imported from the United States with a 1954 trade value of almost $400 million. Of this amount almost $99 million were direct concessions to the United States on agricultural imports. About two-thirds of these tariff concessions were bindings of the existing rates. Most of the tariff concessions on agricultural products made by the United States were for reductions of about 15 percent. As required by law, these reductions will be applied in three yearly stages with not more than a 5 percent reduction per year.

Principal Concessions Obtained by the United States on Agricultural Products

The United States obtained tariff concessions on diverse agricultural products from 19 of the 21 countries with which negotiations were concluded. As stated above, the 1954 value of the United States exports of these items to the 19 countries was almost $99 million.

The countries making concessions affecting agricultural exports of the United States included the United Kingdom (about $57 million of trade); Canada (almost $12 million); the Benelux countries (Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg - over $11 million); Federal Republic of Germany ($3.7 million); Italy ($2.2 million); and France (almost $2 million).

The following table indicates the distribution of concessions obtained among various commodity groups:

Value of Agricultural Concessions Obtained by United States

Commodity Groups	1954 U.S. Exports of Concession Items to Countries Granting Concessions
	1000 dollars
Fresh and frozen fruits	2,677
Canned fruits	343
Dried fruits and nuts	2,152
Fruit juices	9,630

Seeds-vegetable and grass	1,042
Vegetable oils and oilseeds	2,038
Meat	11,448
Other livestock products	3,021
Tobacco and tobacco products	445
Forest products and naval stores	3,878
Other agricultural products	2,486
Total value	98,833

Concessions on various kinds of fruit and fruit products were obtained from most of the countries with which we concluded an agreement.

Among the fresh fruits the main tariff concessions obtained by the United States were on citrus - oranges, lemons and grapefruit. Concessions were also secured by the United States on fresh grapes and pears, as well as frozen blueberries.

Duties were also reduced or bound on such various canned fruit items as apricots, peaches, pears, pineapples and grapefruit. The existing tariffs in general were reduced by as much as 10 to 20 percent, and in some instances more.

Tariff concessions were made to the United States on such dried fruits as figs, peaches, apples and apricots. The tariff rates were reduced on almonds, pecans and walnuts by several countries.

Canada made a direct concession to the United States on orange juice by reducing its rate from 10 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ percent. The United States exported over \$7 million of orange juice to Canada in 1954. Duties were also reduced or bound on prune juice, citrus juices and several mixed juice items by various countries.

Canada made two concessions of a reciprocal nature to the United States on fresh vegetables - cauliflower and lettuce. The United States also received concessions on such vegetable items as tomato paste (from 2 cents per pound to $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound), several canned vegetable items, as well as canned soups.

The main concessions on grain and grain products were bindings of existing tariff rates on corn (maize) and grain sorghums by the United Kingdom. Haiti reduced its rate on oat cereals prepared for human food from 2.3 cents per pound to 1.4 cents. Hong Kong, a colonial possession of the United Kingdom, bound free its rate on meal and flour of wheat and spelt.

The United States received several concessions on such grass seed items as white clover seed (from 2 cents per pound to 1 cent), sweet clover seed (from 2 cents per pound to $1\frac{3}{4}$ cents), bentgrass seed (from 15% to $7\frac{1}{2}\%$) and seeds of vetches (binding of an effective 10% rate by Germany).

Italy reduced its rates on soybeans from 5% to free and on flaxseed from 10% to free.

Several countries reduced their duties on meat products. The United States may expect to derive some significant benefits from these reductions since our 1954 exports were over $11 million on these items. Rates were reduced on such meat items as bacon, hams, beef and pork (pickled and salted), canned meats, frozen tongues of beef and veal (from 12 to 10% - United States exported over $6 million worth to Benelux countries in 1954) and edible offal of beef and veal.

Austria and Chile each made tariff concessions to the United States on inedible tallow. Germany reduced its effective rate on lard from 20 percent to 18 percent.

In the tobacco and tobacco products field, the United States received tariff concessions on items which had a trade value of $445,000 in 1954. The Benelux countries reduced their rates on cigars and cigarillos from 35 to 30%. Germany reduced its rate on cigarettes by almost 17 percent. Other concessions were made on leaf tobacco.

Several concessions were made to the United States on forest products and naval stores by different countries, covering about $3.9 million of trade value in 1954.

Duty reductions were also made by various countries on other agricultural products. The Benelux countries bound the rate on honey at 12 percent. Japan and Canada both reduced their rates on beer and ale. France reduced its rate on cotton linters from 14 to 12 percent.

American agriculture will most likely receive some additional indirect benefits as a result of the bilateral negotiations entered into by the other 21 countries with one another. For instance, Canada gave a direct concession to Cuba on unstemmed tobacco that is imported into Canada by cigar manufacturers for use exclusively in the manufacture of cigars in Canadian factories. Canada reduced its rate from 15 cents per pound to $12\frac{1}{2}$ cents. Another concession was granted by Canada to Cuba on stemmed tobacco, the duty on this being reduced from $22\frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound to 20 cents. Canada also agreed to reduce its rate on cigars valued at more than \$6 per pound. The present tariff is \$1.75 per pound, plus 15 percent; the new rate granted Cuba will be \$1.50 per pound, plus 10 percent. The United States will benefit from these lowered rates under the most-favored-nation clause contained in GATT, since United States exports of these items to Canada in 1954 amounted to over \$2 million.

Principal Agricultural Products on which Duty Concessions Were Made by the United States

United States tariff duties were reduced on about $147.7 million worth of agricultural products in terms of 1954 imports into the United States.

The United States gave tariff concessions on agricultural products to 18 of the 21 countries with which it completed negotiations. On the basis of 1954 trade, Turkey received concessions on the product with the largest trade getting a tariff reduction on unstemmed, aromatic, smoke-cured leaf tobacco and other unstemmed leaf tobacco (1954 imports into the United States from Turkey amounted to more than $35 million).

Other countries receiving concessions on important trade in agricultural products (in terms of dollar values) were Cuba (about $23.4 million), Italy ($18.6 million), Dominican Republic (almost $10 million), Canada (almost $7 million) and the Benelux countries (about $3.9 million).

The following table indicates the distribution of agricultural concessions made by the United States, among the various agricultural commodity groups:

Value of Agricultural Concessions Granted by United States

Commodity Groups	Total U.S. Imports, 1954 1/
1000 dollars
Fruit and fruit products	4,937
Vegetables and vegetable products	10,649
Seeds	4,592
Molasses and sugar sirups	33,837
Wines and beverages	6,508
Tobacco and tobacco products	56,112
Dairy products	7,311
Animal products, excluding dairy	2,945
Forest products	2,378
Other agricultural products	18,425
Total value	147,694

1/ Tariff concessions made by the United States apply to imports from all countries, other than Communist dominated countries; hence total imports, excluding those from such countries, are used.

Among the concessions given on fruit and fruit products by the United States were those on prepared or preserved apples, other than dried, desiccated or evaporated (reduction from 1.25 cents per pound to 1.07 cents per pound, or slightly less than 15 percent); on frozen blueberries (from 8-3/4% to 7½% to Canada); grapes, other than hothouse and imported from February 15 to June 30 inclusive (from 6½ cents per cubic foot to 5½ cents per cubic foot - to Chile); the remaining concessions were mainly on specialty items such as orange marmalade and various types of jams and jellies.

The United States gave tariff concessions on about $10.6 million, on the basis of 1954 trade, of vegetables and vegetable products. Over half of this was on tomatoes, canned or otherwise prepared or preserved; the United States tariff was reduced from 25% to 21% and this concession was given to Italy. The United States duty on turnips and rutabagas was reduced from 6½ cents per 100 pounds to 6 cents - this concession was given directly to Canada.

The main grass seeds on which the United States gave tariff concessions were on sweet clover seed (from 1 cent per pound to 0.8 cents); bromegrass seed (from 1 cent per pound to 0.8 cents); and grass seeds and other forage crop seeds, n.s.p.f.

Concessions relating to molasses and sugar sirups dealt principally with inedible molasses and effected about a 15% reduction in the duty on that product. This concession was negotiated with Cuba in the light of the increase in rates on liquid sugar to equalize with dry sugar negotiated by the United States with Cuba and the Dominican Republic.

Some concessions were made by the United States on wines and beverages. The largest concession, in terms of dollar values, granted by the United States was on vermouth containing not more than 24 percent of alcohol (in containers holding each 1 gallon or less) - the United States duty was reduced about 15 percent. Other concessions were made on wines and cherry juice.

Two concessions on cheese were made by the United States. The most important of these was made on an Italian cheese made from sheep's milk in original loaves. The United States reduced its duty on this product from 3.5 cents per pound to 3 cents. The other cheese concession was made to Norway on cheese made from goat's milk whey (Gjetost).

In the animal products category United States concessions included: live canaries valued not over $5 each (from 25 cents to 21 cents each - to the Benelux countries); edible gelatin - 1954 imports of over $850,000; and fresh, chilled or frozen game (except birds).

The main tariff concessions granted by the United States on forest products were on tanning extracts (not containing alcohol). Concessions on these extracts were made to Italy and Austria - duties were reduced from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 percent.

The United States reduced its tariff rates on various other agricultural products, with a trade value of about $18.4 million. Over two-thirds of this value was accounted for by the United States reduction in the duty on unsweetened chocolate from 3/4 cents to 5/8 cents per pound. This concession was made to the Dominican Republic. United States duties on biscuits, wafers, puddings, cakes and other baked articles were reduced 15 percent, as a direct concession to the United Kingdom. These items had a trade value of over $2 million in 1954.

Renegotiation of the concession on liquid sugar, heretofore granted by the United States, was successfully concluded with Cuba and the Dominican Republic under the provisions of Article XXVIII of the GATT. This renegotiation is designed to effect an equalization in the rates of duty applicable to liquid sugar and to dry crystalline sugar. Liquid sugar is entered under a quota established by the Sugar Act of 1948, as amended. Imports come mainly from Cuba and are valued at about $4.5 million annually.

Tabulation of Agricultural Concessions Obtained and Concessions Made by the United States

The tables on the following pages present the individual concessions made and obtained by the United States on agricultural products.

Concessions obtained by the United States have been translated from the respective foreign tariff schedules and are shown in broad commodity groups. Specific rates have been converted from foreign currency and unit measures to cents per pound. The value of imports from the countries granting the concessions have been converted to dollars. In general, trade data are for 1954, the latest year for which statistics were generally available. In those cases where foreign data were not available, United States export statistics were used.

Concessions made by the United States are also presented by commodity groups. The value of imports into the United States shown in the final column is from all countries, excluding the Communist dominated countries. Under present United States tariff law, a duty change negotiated with one country becomes applicable to imports from all countries, other than the Communist dominated ones. This also reflects the most-favored-nation provision contained in GATT.
